

Uganda Update for Wednesday, February 14, 2018
To: Bob@ugandamission.net

Have still been having Internet Issues so this is late!

We have completed the men's conference and by all indications, it went very well. The men talked about the groups from various areas getting together and continuing to work on what we have studied. That is encouraging to me. A group photo is below.

The last thing I did last Saturday before leaving Kyamagemule was take part in planting a tree in front of the school. The head teacher at the school said it was so they could say it will remind them of me. Not sure how to take that.

My next project is to take part in the celebration at the school at Seeta Nazigo. The test results from the end of last school year have come in and the school did well.

Some of you may remember the photo from a couple of trips ago, of a little girl who had a horrendous scar on her stomach from a botched operation. Not only did it look terrible, it would not heal. One of you gave some funds for a second surgery and it went well. Her dad brought her by to see me yesterday. One of the photos is from that visit and her healed surgery. The other her dad sent me this morning as she began the first day of preschool.

I had lunch today with Bruce and Pam Sinclair. They are permanent MTW missionaries here in Uganda. Bruce first came to Uganda with me in 2001 and later returned with Pam and have been here since then.

Thanks for your continued prayers.
